Main Street Builders construct community growth around Golden Rule

PRINCETON — When the new Princeton Public Library is dedicated later this month, one of the spotlighted contributors to that effort will be Main Street Builders, a contracting company owned by brothers Adam and Rusty Sarver.

Adam Sarver said, "We have been in business since March 2003. We're actually a general contractor, which started out as a residential contractor, then branched out to commercial work about a year ago. We do all aspects of a building."

Besides the Princeton Public Library building, which involved renovating the inside of the old Princeton Post Office to meet the needs of a modern library, Main Street built a hangar at the Mercer County Airport for the Mercer County Civil Air Patrol and the new Princeton Rescue Squad building on Brick Street, among other projects.

"Basically, we run our business like the Golden Rule: Do unto others as you would have them do unto you; be as fair as possible, and constantly work to build a good reputation. We try to invest our time into projects to help the area," he said.

Main Street Builders' business offices are located in the old Maidenform Building at 311 South Walker St. The business is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday-Friday and has 15 employees. The phone number is (304) 487-3912.
